During the year under review the Group acquired a micro-processor unit HCL System-2. This system has two double density floppy drives in addition to a mini floppy with a CPU having 64 K Byte memory. The system is equipped with FORTRAN and BASIC compilers and Word Processing software. This system apart from being used for the Group's data processing requirements and publications, has proved useful in bringing out the Institute's Newsletter and some other publications.

The Group has been requested by the Indian Council of Social Science

Research to provide consultancy and training to the senior staff of a research institute in Bangladesh for establishment of information system similar to its own. The Amsterdam University and Free University of Amsterdam have proposed a joint programme of research on multinationals in collaboration with the Group, under the second phase of IDPAD.
